

Nancy Irey

West River, MD

Nancy Irey brings an extensive financial services background to Omega Performance, having over 30 years of experience in the industry. More than 20 years of this experience is in regional and national banks in retail sales, commercial lending, portfolio management and workout as a manager and as a relationship manager. Her banking career enabled her to work with the U.S. Small Business Administration and various economic development companies.

Nancy's specialties include numerous aspects of commercial credit, commercial sales, consumer credit, and retail sales. In addition to her experiences with a wide range of Omega Performance's clients, Nancy has taught classes for the American Institute of Banking and has served as an instructor for Montgomery College, Office of Continuing Education.

Nancy joined the Maryland Office of the Commissioner of Financial Regulation in September 1999 as Assistant Commissioner Bank Supervision. In this position she was responsible for supervising and coordinating the regulation of banks, savings banks and non-depository trust companies; conducting research; and functioned as an advisory role to the Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner regarding issues concerning the safety and soundness of financial institutions; leading development of regulatory policy and supervising other fiscal and strategic planning activities of the agency. She was instrumental in developing and establishing a one-day training session for Maryland bank directors known as "A Day With the Commissioner".

Prior to joining the Office of the Commissioner, Nancy was a consultant with Omega Performance, working in the areas of consumer and commercial credit and retail and commercial sales. As a consultant, she provided support to the sales staff in presenting program over views to clients, customizing training needs, facilitation, and evaluation of training results.

Nancy graduated with a Bachelor of Science degree in Accounting from Madonna College, and also holds MBA in finance from American University Kogod School of Business.
